THE INTELLIGENCER.

SKETCHES OF LORD BROUGHAM.

The last number of Barnard's Journal of Education, has a fine dissertation on the life and character of Lord Brougham, by Mr. E. J. Sears, of New York, from which we make the following interesting extracts:

His Youth.
His parents, though neither wealthy nor distinguished by aristocratic titles, were in comfortable circumstances, and occupied a highly respectable social position. In childhood he was delicate and feeble to such a degree—being subject to frequent attacks of illness—that only faint hopes were entertained that he would ever attain the age of manhood. The apprehensions thus excited were rather increased than diminished by the precocious development of his mental faculties. Another child of the Brougham family, whose intelligence and memory had been equally remarkable, having died in his tenth year—for young Henry had not only learned to read with facility, and to perform the simpler operations in arithmetic when six years old, but was capable of reciting whole passages from Waller, Dryden and Pope, with unerring accuracy. The family physician concurred in the opinion that it was not desirable to encourage his intellectual progress as long as his health continued in this precarious state. For over six months the child was scarcely permitted to see a book. Finding that he was not the better physically, if not the worse, for this privation, his aunt—a liberally educated sensible maiden lady—took upon herself the responsibility not only of furnishing him such books as he wished, but devoted herself earnestly to teaching him. She had been engaged nearly a year at this labor of love before the secret was discovered; and, as "little Harry" had then become as healthy as any of his playmates, it is almost needless to say that she did not receive much blame from his parents; although the doctor felt somewhat mortified, when it became evident that, after all, it was not his learned and skilful advice which was attended with such excellent results. This little episode, trifling as it is in itself, and early in the life of Brougham as it occurred, is worth mentioning thus parenthetically, as an additional instance of the important influence exercised by woman on the early education of illustrious men.

It is one to which Lord Brougham refers himself with pride and gratitude to this day; and the remembrance of which has rendered him through life the uncompromising friend of the gentler sex.

Effort in Favor of Education.
The general opinion was, even at the beginning of the present century, that the working classes needed little education, if any—that if they could read their Bible and prayer book with tolerable correctness, and sign their names when called upon to do so, they were sufficiently learned. Nay, there are those who conscientiously believed that it would not be safe for the state to teach them more; and it was taken for granted that such of them as were disposed could easily learn this much at the private village schools, or from the parish clergyman. And the people themselves easily believed what their betters told them. That such opinions should have been entertained in England, at so recent a period, may well seem strange, but the fact is indisputable.

Those who look a little further back, however, at the history of education in England, can hardly be surprised at the opposition which Henry Brougham had to encounter at every step of his progress in the good work. When the learned Erasmus undertook to promote the study of Greek in Oxford University, he met with still more serious obstacles. There were, even among the professors of that now famous institution of learning, who regarded Greek with so much horror as an heretical if not Satanic language, that they pronounced the Greek New Testament "an impious and dangerous book," while they regarded a Latin version of the same as the Holy Scriptures. No wonder that Erasmus was forced to withdraw from a college in which such professors were the principal instructors; and that those known to be studying the Satanic language were hooted and hissed at in the streets. After many vain efforts, on the part of learned men on the Continent, to reconcile the most enlightened of the islanders to the language of Homer and Plato, Zschylus and Aristotle, Euripides and Longinus, it required the absolute and determined interference of Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey to secure its students a protection within the walls of the university. But there is this material difference between Erasmus and Brougham. The former sought to render the Greek learned, the latter to render the poor intelligent. It was not expected that the condition of the wealthy would be much improved by a knowledge of the Greek, whereas the benefits accruing to the poor from even the rudiments of education would be incalculable. Erasmus was employed and encouraged by the great, and liberally paid for his services. Brougham was oppressed by the great, had no encouragement but that afforded by his own generous aspirations, and far from receiving any pay, freely opened his private purse for the advancement of the good cause.

DEFENCE OF QUEEN CAROLINE.
Mr. Brougham had now become one of the most popular men in the kingdom. There was scarcely any case of importance for which his legal services were not sought after, either by plaintiff or defendant. This, however, did not prevent him from establishing a model school for the use of the poorer classes in London, in 1819, immediately after the debate on the Education Committee was brought to a close. He visited the new school twice or three times a week; often taking part in the exercises himself, and always taking a deep interest both in the moral and intellectual progress of the students. This is the manner in which he was spending his leisure hours, when Queen Caroline and her friends turned their attention to him as the ablest and most conscientious lawyer which they could find in England—the best qualified and suitable in every sense—to defend her Majesty from the foul charges preferred against her by her royal husband, and, if possible, restore her to her lost privileges and dignity. He did not hesitate to undertake the case, although he saw at a glance the serious responsibility he should incur by doing so. He had already rendered himself sufficiently obnoxious to the court and nobility by his efforts on behalf of the poor; and he was aware that there were many who had given him their support in his exertions in favor of popular education who, if he became champion of Queen Caroline against the King, would be forced, for their own sakes, to abandon him. But his resolution was formed. A woman, whom he believed to have

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

It is a fact that, at some period, every member of the human family is subject to disease or disturbance of the bodily functions; but, with the aid of a good tonic and the exercise of plain common sense, they may be able to regulate the system as to secure permanent health. In order to accomplish this desired object, the true course to pursue is certainly that which will produce a natural state of things at the base of vital strength and life. For this purpose, Dr. Hostetter has introduced into this country a preparation bearing his name, which is not a new medicine, but one that has been tried for years, giving satisfaction to all who have used it. The Bitters operate powerfully upon the stomach, bowels, and liver, restoring them to a healthy and vigorous action, and thus, by the simple process of strengthening nature, enable the system to triumph over disease.

For the cure of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Nausea, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, or any Bilious Complaints, arising from a morbid inaction of the Stomach or Bowels, producing Cramps, Dysentery, Colic, Chills, Morbus, &c., these Bitters have no equal.

Diarrhoea, dysentery, or flux, so generally contracted by new settlers and caused principally by the change of water and diet, will be speedily regulated by a brief use of this preparation. Dyspepsia, a disease which is probably more prevalent in all its various forms, than any other, and the cause of which may always be attributed to derangements of the digestive organs, will be cured without fail by using HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, as per directions on the bottle. For this disease every physician will recommend Bitters of some kind; then why not use an article known to be infallible? All nations have their Bitters, as a preventive of disease and strengthener of the system in general; and among them all there is not to be found a more healthy people than the Germans, from whom this preparation emanated, based upon scientific experiments which have tended to prove the value of this great preparation in the scale of medicinal science.

FEVER AND AGUE.—This trying and provoking disease, which fixes its tentacles upon the body of man, reducing him to a mere shadow in a short time, and rendering him physically and mentally useless, can be driven from the body by the use of HOSTETTER'S RENOWNED BITTERS. Further, none of the above-stated diseases can be contracted, even in exposed situations, if the Bitters are used as per directions. And as they neither create nausea nor offend the palate, and render necessary any change of diet, or interruption of ordinary pursuits, but promote sound sleep and healthy digestion, the complaint is removed as speedily as is consistent with the production of a thorough and permanent cure.

For Persons in Advanced Years, who are suffering from an enfeebled constitution and infirm body, these Bitters are invaluable as a restorative of strength and vigor, and need only to be tried to be appreciated. And to a mother while nursing her Bitters are indispensable, especially when the demands of the infant are inadequate to the demands of the child, consequently her strength must yield, and here it is where a good tonic, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is needed to impart temporary strength and vigor to the system. Ladies should by all means try this remedy for all cases of debility, and, before so doing, should ask their physician, who, if he is acquainted with the virtue of the Bitters, will recommend their use in all cases of weakness.

CAUTION.—We caution the public against using any of the many imitations or counterfeits, but ask for Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters, and see that each bottle has the words "Dr. J. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters" blown on the side of the bottle, and stamped on the metallic cap covering the cork, and observe that our autograph signature is on the label.

Prepared and sold by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa., and sold by all druggists, grocers, and dealers generally throughout the United States, Canada, South America, and Germany.
